Rhetorical Analysis

Arguably, education is very crucial in the life of an individual. As a matter of fact, globalization and global competition require skilled and learned individuals. From the article, it is clear that the author is so categorical in expressing the importance of education, especially when someone gets to college. In fact, most of the gratitude goes to parents, uncles, aunts, as well as all the people who get involved in one way or another in making the education achievement a reality. Certainly, it is essential to always ask ourselves who we really are, and what exactly we are doing in where we are. As a matter of fact, who we are can be defined by how an individual was brought up by their parents, as well as by the society. It is the responsibility of the entire village to raise a child. In this case, the author asserts that there are various factors that affect the development and growth of a child. In the article, it is evident that American village is characterized by wars, guns, fanatical religions, as well as slim based popular culture. For one to survive in such a society you should be part of those who have taken a lot of grit. In general perspective, the society we live in molds us to be the people we are, and it is essential for the one to adopt his/her environment and fight to achieve the best in life, especially on the issue pertaining college education.

In America, getting an education and a better life depends on the individual. Life is not only about fighting on issues of drugs and violence; it goes beyond that since one has to struggle with the educational system to succeed. In a society where there is a gap between the rich and the poor, the author clearly asserts how important it is for one to choose what they wanted to study. For example, the author elaborates how his father vied his opinion of becoming a lawyer (Edmundson 2). In achieving the best, it is crucial to choose what interests you and carry on with it in college. In America, education has various enemies that one should be aware of; the enemy is university education. As a matter of fact, many people in society believe that going to university is the best name for prosperity. Students aim at best credential that will earn them a good job. The rich bring up their children and streamline them towards the material world. By this, the poor believe that it is a failure not to be in the group of the rich.

The college, that students opt to be a part of so as to make a life, is an avenue of sports, clubs, music, and life parties. The focus of study at colleges and universities is elsewhere, meaning students in the education system live for the future. Another crucial aspect in college is that the faculty issue is a problem. Students are always compelled to the future, yet they are not even in a position to comprehend their progressive scholarly articles. This is actually an absurd scenario. Professors always want their students in America to be smart and get ahead, but at the end of the day this is not achieved (Edmundson 3). The professors in the American education system have made a deal with their students, and no one wants to take seriously what happens in the classroom. Critically, the author is categorical about how the final result is achieved. With that, the final result is the matter. No one has the mistake; it is that people are becoming smarter.

The college has not been serving an all rounded purpose for those who commit various crimes and mistakes may go unpunished. In fact, those who commit the mistakes may even go ahead and assault their victims on a frequent basis. Another tremendous problem in college that one needs to be aware of is cheating. Cheating in American colleges and other colleges come in various ways; this includes the internet, as well as giving the students the same exam always. The American society has been cut across by the aspect of money, whereby every problem can be solved on monetary values (Edmundson 4). This aspect takes away the importance of societal values and educational goals.

Professors focus on attaining a bright future through various means at the expense of education and students' future. In this case, what is important to everyone is getting along and getting through the education system peacefully. The best way to achieve this is by not making any trouble. It is indispensable to always be who you are, when joining college many people would have tried to tell you who you are. Going to college can tremendously change an individual and the perceptions that she/he had been imparted with (Edmundson 5). The author of the article uses scholars to elaborate on various aspects of life.

Understanding who we are exactly can be tricky in life. At one point, we are what our parents made us be. In another perspective, we are what the society and college life makes us be. The personal realization of who we are matters a lot. In most cases, we comprehend who we really are by reading issue pertaining real life situation. The author learned a lot about life experience by reading Ralph Emerson and Fred articles (Edmundson 6). As a matter of fact, satisfaction in life in most cases is relative. People may view you to be satisfied but in the long run it is you alone who comprehends the level of satisfaction (Edmundson 7). The society and the environment always affect person's growth, but at the end of the day we actually get to be aware of who we are, as well as where we are. The professor suggests the reading of the books that help in understanding various issues about life, but we choose to take in the ideas or not.

Learning is a continuous process but one may not actually learn what is relevant to him/her. The society is an encouraging domain that will help those living within. In general perspective, education helps in finding out who we are and the work we want to be associated with. But one must always do what interests them (Edmundson 8). The best thing is to ascertain who we are and focus on what we want. In the modern society, money has become a main issue but one needs to do what is best for them regardless of the monetary value attached to it.
